National Eye Institute (NEI) is an institute of the National Institutes of Health that conducts and supports research that helps prevent and treat eye diseases and other disorders of vision. The research has led to sight-saving treatments, reduced visual impairment and blindness, and improved the quality of life for people of all ages. Research is conducted by NEI staff at facilities in Bethesda, MD (intramural), basic and clinical labs.

Information on eye diseases and vision research can be provided upon request if you prefer paper information instead of online information. The website has eye health information from A-Z.
