Epilepsy Foundation offers news, education and information on an ongoing basis. The toll-free telephone number is a source of information, resources, and support. The agency can provide people with epilepsy with information on topics such as employment rights/tips; sources of reduced-cost or no-cost medication, physician referrals, special education, and health insurance information. Send e-mail to contactus@efa.org

Information includes medical reference and literature searches of in-house library and database for physicians, allied health professionals, service providers, individuals, and the general public regarding epilepsy and seizure disorders.

Information Requests - Experts can research many in-depth questions about epilepsy and seizure disorders. The usual procedure is for the information specialist to research the question, or locate materials relevant to the topic, and get back to you within a few days. Specialists are trained to not only aid the general public but to assist in scholarly research as well.
