The MedicAlert service connects medical professionals, family, and friends with those in need of help 24-hours a day. The process works this way. You purchase a MedicAlert medical identification bracelet or pendant for the individual to wear. Etched on the back of the ID will be that person's confidential identification number, medical condition, and any medications. MedicAlert can be used as a safety and tracking device for individuals with dementia and children with special needs.

Finally, also inscribed on the bracelet is a telephone number that can be called collect any time of the day. For example, the call may be made by a paramedic, a hospital, the person wearing the bracelet if he or she can not reach someone to help, or by someone helping the individual in an emergency or if he or she gets lost.

Missing persons and wandering individuals are a big concern for law enforcement, as well as family and friends, especially as it relates to the autism and dementia communities. MedicAlert has a Wandering Support Service called L.E.A.P. L.E.A.P. is a program to help law enforcement agencies raise awareness of MedicAlert IDs and membership. Call for more information.
