For individuals that are using absorbent products, such as adult diapers, but are experiencing financial hardship, you may have access to a local Diaper Bank for assistance. Diapers banks are a resource for people who cannot afford to purchase needed absorbent incontinence products due to financial difficulties. Diaper banks are only one way that a person may work to reduce the costs associated with incontinence products.

Simon Foundation for Continence provides information on Diaper Banks and a directory of United States Diaper Banks. Information is also available on How to Start a Diaper Bank and How to Have a Successful Diaper Drive.

Please note: The Simon Foundation for Continence does not have products to give away, and we do not sell any products. We also are unable to provide compensation, grants, or reimbursement for products.
