National Counseling Group's Residential Diversion Program provides a versatile treatment program designed to create change within an individual's home environment, thereby diverting a likely long-term placement in a residential facility and reducing the ongoing treatment needs upon return to home and community. Strategies for intervention and facilitating progress will be created based on both individual and family needs and will be incorporated into a level system that will serve as the family's guide to change.

The program plan will include the following:

- Comprehensive evaluation of individual and family functioning;
- Development of individualized treatment goals and therapeutic interventions;
- Development of home contract;
- Family therapy;
- Individual counseling;
- Behavior management;
- Mentoring;
- Life skills;
- Academic enrichment activities;
- 24-hour crisis intervention;
- Case management;
