National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke (NINDS) is part of the National Institutes of Health. The missions of NINDS is to

- Reduce the burden of neurological diseases burden borne by every age group, by every segment of society, by people all over the world.
- Seek knowledge about the brain and the nervous system, and to use that knowledge to reduce the burden of neurological disease for all people.

NINDS conducts research on the causes, prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of neurological disorders and stroke, and supports basic research in related scientific areas. NINDS also collects and disseminates research information related to neurological disorders. Health information for various health issues, such as Multiple Sclerosis or Parkinson's disease can be found on the website, as well as information about research being done on those health issues.
